

the first time in the history of the world, the people of the United States have been called upon to make a choice between two opposite ways of life, between two different philosophies, namely, between Anarchy and Government.

The people of the United States have chosen the latter, and have chosen it by a large majority.

They have chosen to have a government, and they have chosen to have a representative government.

They have chosen to have a government, and they have chosen to have a representative government.

They have chosen to have a government, and they have chosen to have a representative government.

They have chosen to have a government, and they have chosen to have a representative government.

They have chosen to have a government, and they have chosen to have a representative government.

They have chosen to have a government, and they have chosen to have a representative government.

They have chosen to have a government, and they have chosen to have a representative government.

They have chosen to have a government, and they have chosen to have a representative government.

They have chosen to have a government, and they have chosen to have a representative government.

They have chosen to have a government, and they have chosen to have a representative government.

They have chosen to have a government, and they have chosen to have a representative government.

They have chosen to have a government, and they have chosen to have a representative government.

They have chosen to have a government, and they have chosen to have a representative government.

They have chosen to have a government, and they have chosen to have a representative government.

They have chosen to have a government, and they have chosen to have a representative government.

They have chosen to have a government, and they have chosen to have a representative government.